

SOMETHING WORTH HANDING OVER.

I'm a plumber. I built a quoting tool for the guys standing at your counter, and I'd like them to know it exists.

I run Tom Falk Plumbing & Heating. A while back I built Dead Hand because I kept losing money at the kitchen table — tired, customer waiting, and the number I said in the next thirty seconds was the one I had to honor in the morning.

You know the guys I mean. One truck, maybe three. Good at the work. They price in their head, and most are better at it than they think — but not at seven on a Friday night. Some are underwater on jobs they would swear made money.

Dead Hand fixes the number, not the man. They set their labor rates, their material margin and their overhead once. After that they put in the hours and the parts and the right price comes out with the margin already inside it. Then they turn the phone around and the customer gets a clean estimate with none of that on it. $12.99 a month, in a browser — no app store, nothing to install.

NO SPIFF, AND THAT'S ON PURPOSE.

I'm not offering you a cut. Plenty of houses don't let their people take money from a vendor, and I'm not going to hand you something you'd have to declare or turn down. What's actually in it for you is simpler: a contractor who prices right stays in business, keeps the truck full, and keeps buying from you. The ones who guess low are the ones who quietly disappear owing you money.

IF YOU WANT TO POINT SOMEONE AT IT

Tell them getdeadhand.com. That's the whole thing — nothing to sign them up for, no form for you to fill in.

IF IT HELPS, THE SENTENCE THAT WORKS

"THERE'S A PLUMBER UP IN PA WHO BUILT A QUOTING APP FOR GUYS LIKE YOU. TWELVE BUCKS A MONTH, NO APP STORE."

THERE'S A COUNTER SHEET TOO

A one-page version with this code, sized for the counter or the board. Print as many as you want:

GETDEADHAND.COM/COUNTER

WHAT IT ISN'T

It isn't a CRM and won't turn into one. It doesn't take payments, chase invoices, or do anything with a customer list. And I don't sell them prices — every number in there is theirs. I'm not putting a parts catalog in front of your customers with my markup on it. That's your business, not mine.
